Inga L. Parsons : Fourth Amendment Practice And Procedure before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Fourth Amendment Practice And Procedure:

"Litigating under the Fourth Amendment requires courage and persistence," according to Inga L. Parsons author of Fourth Amendment Practice and Procedure. "The defense attorneys role is an especially important one," she says, "and should not be marginalized because of post-9/11 national security concerns such as the passage of the Patriot Act." Indeed given the scaling back of fundamental privacy rights of all American citizens, Fourth Amendment litigation is more important than ever today. In Fourth Amendment Practice and Procedure, Parsons provides a practical, comprehensive, and up-to-date guide for litigating issues under the Fourth Amendment at every stage of a criminal case from the first meeting with a client, to the arraignment, negotiations, pretrial motions, hearings, trial, and post-trial proceedings. Organized for busy practitioners who need quick references, Fourth Amendment Practice and Procedure can be easily carried in a briefcase for the initial client interview, subpoenaing witnesses, or cross-examining the detaining officer. There are specific chapters on litigating warrants, the Exclusionary Rule, and the major exceptions to the warrant requirement including the automobile exception, border searches, and technological searches. The Motion Practice section takes the lawyer step by step through the stages of filing and blue-backing motions to suppress evidence. Each chapter provides analysis and strategies on tough legal questions such as when does an investigatory stop become an arrest.

...a smart, concise, and often witty way to learn the law and to strategize about how to help your client. -- Jan A. Rostal, Esq., Federal Defenders Office, Eastern District of New York
An invaluable resource for both novice and veteran, it is a must for all criminal defense attorneys and prosecutors. -- Jack T. Litman, prominent criminal defense lawyer and partner at Litman, Asche Gioiella, New York, New York
