

(Free and download) Sociology of Constitutions: A Paradoxical Perspective (Studies in the Sociology of Law)

Sociology of Constitutions: A Paradoxical Perspective (Studies in the Sociology of Law)

From Routledge
*ebooks | Download PDF | ePub | DOC | audiobook

DOWNLOAD

READ ONLINE

#6032935 in Books 2016-05-10Original language:EnglishPDF # 1 10.00 x 7.25 x .75l, .0 #File Name: 1472479599298 pages | File size: 31.Mb

From Routledge : Sociology of Constitutions: A Paradoxical Perspective (Studies in the Sociology of Law) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Sociology of Constitutions: A Paradoxical Perspective (Studies in the Sociology of Law):

This collection brings together some of the most influential sociologists of law to confront the challenges of current transnational constitutionalism. It shows the constitution appearing in a new light: no longer as an essential factor of unity and stabilisation but as a potential defence of pluralism and innovation. The first part of the book is devoted to the analysis of the concept of constitution, highlighting the elements that can contribute from a socio-legal perspective, to clarifying the principle meanings attributed to the constitution. The study goes on to analyse some concrete aspects of the functioning of constitutions in contemporary society. In applying Luhmann's General Systems Theory to a comparative analysis of the concept of constitution, the work contributes to a better understanding of this traditional concept in both its institutionalised and functional aspects. Defining the constitutions' contents and functions both at the conceptual level and by taking empirical issues of particular comparative interest into account, this study will be of importance to scholars and students of sociology of law, sociology of politics and comparative public law.

'Febbrajo and Corsi have collected a number of highly innovative contributions to the global scholarly debate on constitutionalism. By referring to paradoxes of constitutions, to their role as "problem and solution" the book offers a most sophisticated and fruitful perspective on constitutions as central figures of modern society.' Alfons Bora, Bielefeld University, Germany 'This book brings together European and non-European experts to reflect on the different forms that constitutional roles may take and the paradoxes triggered by them. It discusses current problems and presents possible solutions, and at the same time examines the paradoxes that are developing. The result is an outstanding text that approaches this complex issue from a perspective closely related to social systems theory, developed by Niklas Luhmann, as well as proposing new concepts and elaborate theoretical connections.' Dario Rodriguez, Universidad Diego Portales, Chile 'Sociology of Constitutions presents a refreshing and innovative take on an old question: how to observe the evolution of society through the lens of the legal system? In order to achieve their goals, the editors bring together la creme de la creme of the sociology of law. Using the modern phenomenon of constitutions, the chapters discuss the great paradox of the structural coupling of law and the political system: constitutions are the basis of the legitimation of politics and politics provides legitimacy for constitutions. This volume confronts the view that this is the cause of the breakdown of the legal system in modern society.' Germano Schwartz, Centro Universitario La Salle, and Complexo Educacional FMU, Brazil 'This work represents a defining moment for those who seriously want to think about systems theory in relation to the constitution, reflecting on its limits and possibilities. The book is mandatory for those who want to unravel the paradoxes of modern constitutions and build new perspectives.' Sandra Regina Martini, University of Sao Paulo, Brazil
About the Author
Alberto Febbrajo is Professor of Sociology of Law at the Department of Law, University of Macerata, Italy. Giancarlo Corsi is Associate Professor of Sociology at the Department of Communication and Economics, University of Modena-Reggio Emilia, Italy.