Judith-Anne MacKenzie, Mary Phillips : Textbook on Land Law before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Textbook on Land Law:

This title in the textbook series is a successor to "A Practical Approach to Land Law". The book has been thoroughly revised to make the text more user-friendly and the opportunity has been taken to adopt a more critical approach. Suggestions for further readings are included.; The authors provide a practical approach to the subject (with the emphasis on the law as it is, rather than as it was). The text takes account of recent statutory and case law developments, and in particular includes an expanded consideration of squatters title, implied trusts and estoppel, and undue influence in relation to mortgages.

'...an excellent and affordable starting point' From a review of the previous edition in Northern Ireland Legal Quarterly
About the Author Judith-Anne MacKenzie is a barrister. After some years as an academic, a period as Assistant Parliamentary Counsel and later as a legal adviser at the DTI, she is now Head of Railways (Legal) at the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Until her retirement, Mary Phillips was Dean of the Inns of Court School of Law. She has now returned to teaching land law as a Visiting Professor at City University, London.
