In a political climate which encourages interdependence between States, international law is steadily developing and increasingly becoming a key factor in the organisation of inter-State relations. This concept of interdependence implies a strong commitment by all States to international law and a shared responsibility for its application. Through the ad hoc Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law (CAHDI), the Council of Europe contributes to the implementation of public international law and further acts as a catalyst for its development. Indeed, the CAHDI has established itself as an invaluable actor in the development of public international law, functioning notably as the European Observatory of Reservations and Declarations to International Treaties, a unique and flagship function acknowledged today by other regional organisations. The CAHDI also acts as a laboratory and a catalyst for new ideas. This volume, containing thought-provoking essays by former and current Legal Advisers from a wide selection of Council of Europe countries, arose from the conference celebrating the 50th anniversary of the CAHDI meetings and showcases CAHDI's pioneering work. Dans un contexte politique qui favorise l'interdependance entre les Etats, le droit international ne cesse de se developper et apparait comme un element important qui organise les relations entre ceux-ci. Ce concept d'interdependance implique un engagement fort de la part de tous les Etats envers le droit international, ainsi qu'une responsabilite partagee pour son application. A travers le Comite ad hoc des Conseillers juridiques sur le droit international public (CAHDI), le Conseil de l'Europe contribue a la mise en oeuvre du droit international public et agit comme le catalyseur de son developpement. En effet, le CAHDI s'est impose comme un acteur indispensable pour le developpement du droit international public, fonctionnant notamment en tant qu'Observatoire europeen des reserves aux traites internationaux, une fonction unique et phare reconnue aujourd'hui par d'autres organisations regionales. Le CAHDI agit egalement comme un laboratoire et un catalyseur de nouvelles idees. Ce volume, contenant des essais incitant a la reflexion qui ont ete elabores par d'anciens et actuels Conseillers juridiques d'un vaste eventail de pays du Conseil de l'Europe, est ne de la Conference celebrant le 50eme anniversaire des reunions du CAHDI et illustre le travail de pionnier du CAHDI.
