Alexandra Diehl : The Core Standard of International Investment Protection (International Arbitration Law Library) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Core

Standard of International Investment Protection (International Arbitration Law Library):

This book surveys and analyses the nature of FET as a "new" rule of customary law that is non-contingent and absolute in that it protects a given entity irrespective of the treatment which may be accorded to others. The author explores whether the often-heard criticism of the international investment protection regime is justified. The overarching questions are: Does the system's mixture of private arbitration and public law indeed undermine accountability and independence in judicial decision-making? Does it trump principles of legislative supremacy and, in the end, alter a central tenet of representative democracy?
